14.15 – 15.30 Sylvia Francke
Nine Dowsable Patterns in Water: A Possible Link Between ‘The Sounding Cosmos’ and the Process of Creation

When one compares the late 20th century discovery of nine dowsable resonance patterns in water by two Austrian researchers, Gernot Gräfer and Maria Felsenreich, with statements made by Rudolf Steiner ninety years earlier, a link can be traced between the influences of the planets and the coming into being of life-forms on earth. Sylvia Francke will also describe that, with this form of dowsing, it is possible to demonstrate how the waters of ancient sacred places resonate to what has been known as “The Music of the Spheres”.

Entertainment Treasure Hunt

Christopher Strong, the Society’s expert on finding lost objects, will present a treasure hunt with opportunities for dowsers of all levels of skill (and none!) to go searching for prizes. Encouragement will be available for those who would like it and we hope that everybody will end the evening with a sense of achievement and perhaps even a small prize.

Willem Witteveen

The Library of Giza

The Great Pyramid of Giza is not only the best known but also the most enigmatic structure on our planet. It has been studied, measured and illustrated for more than 200 years. Yet no one can say with any certainty why it exists. Willem Witteveen introduces a theory about its original function to demonstrate just how important the Great Pyramid is to our understanding of the modern world and widens the context in which we can now view this spectacular icon. Its purpose was much more powerful than has previously been imagined and was closely associated with the five earthly elements, the five earthly elements responsible for creation.

Willem Witteveen includes the work of great researchers like for instance Tesla, Schauberger and Puharich. The creation of the Great Pyramid and other pyramids was far stranger than we have considered. Thanks to Willem's latest book, the ancient knowledge contained in the Great Pyramid now enters the modern world. This story will probably change your view on human history. This lecture follows the path of the elements in order to demonstrate the purpose of the Great Pyramid. Each element represents a certain process inside the pyramid and when merged, it completes an extraordinary alchemical method for producing sustainable energy.

Ann Lodygowski

Experiences of animal communication

Animals can give us so much information, some happy, some sad, hilarious or even totally unexpected - highwaymen, poachers, drugs they had been given and more!!! They can tell us where they are hurting and what we can do to make them feel better, even if they are long or short sighted. Ann prefers to work remotely as - she gets so much more information that way,

That sounds a bit thin. How about the spiel that went in one of the promotional documents: Ann has excellent credentials having studied anatomy, physiology, herbs and flower remedies and, living surrounded by animals, learned to tune in to them. She prefers to work remotely because she gets much more information that way and regularly works with animals in Canada, New Zealand and France as well as across the UK. She has even worked with horses short-listed for the Olympics.

In this lecture, Thomas will discuss the latest research in the field of Electrosmog and Geopathic stress and present innovative solutions to address the burdens from electro-magnetic radiation and geopathic stress in the human organism. His talk will include a presentation of the principles and types of electrosmog and geopathic stress, the effects on the human organism, typical pathologies, how to analyse and reduce these burdens, as well as a brief practical demonstration of how a building biologist carries out various tests to identify electrosmog and geopathic stress.

Jan Bugge

Sound, Resonance and Frequencies in Healing

How could we apply new knowledge, new science, old wisdom and insight to our lives? Western medicine today assumes that illness is due to impersonal mechanical causes and genetic circumstances but is it so? Jan believes that under the right circumstances the body can heal itself and that the keys to healing are sound, resonance and frequencies. There are still a lot of questions to be answered but we are getting closer and closer to understanding how it works.

“He who understands the secret of sound understands the secret of the universe.”
